35 MILES MORE CONCRETE FOR COUNTY

WILL COMPLETE 25 MILES THIS YEAR IN COUNTY

WOOD COUNTY FORGES AHEAD TO PUT DISTRICT ON THE GOOD ROADS MAP; TO MAKE BIG STRIDES

Wood county will go fearlessly ahead in 1922 to place itself on the good roads map according to the plans now laid by the County Road & Bridge committee who with County Highway Commissioner Ed. Morris and District Highway Engineer F. F. Mengel have just completed a complete inspection trip of the county roads and state trunk highways. Next year's program will include the building of thirty five and one half miles of concrete in all sections of the county, linking up concrete roads now laid and to be completed this year. At the conclusion of next year's program there will be a solid concrete highway from Nekoosa to Marshfield or a distance of 42 miles.

Total 85 Miles

With the addition of thirty five and one half miles of concrete next year. Wood county will then be able to boast of eighty-five miles of concrete highways as compared with Portage county's thirteen miles. In comparison with other counties in the state. Wood county will stand out prominently as wood county can not be ranked with other wealthier counties and yet this county will be among the topnotchers for good roads both for pavement and graded roads.

The county committee composed of Harry Thomas, August Broker and George Brown and Mr. Morris and Mr. Mengel were highly proud of the roads in the county at the present time and are said to be pleased with matters in every detail.

The New Pavement

As a conclusion from their trip of inspection, the committee has decided to recommend the following concrete highways for building next year: nine miles from Seneca Corners to Pittsville, fourteen miles from Marshfield to Pittsville, six miles from Seneca Corners to the Midway cheese factory, one mile through the village of Rudolph, one and one-half miles from Port Edwards to Nekoosa, all of which makes a total of thirty-five and one-half miles.

Besides the new concrete the committee plans the building of many new bridges and culverts over the new highways. Prospects for the employment situation in the county are thus brighter for 1922 as a result of the decision of the highway committee.

Finishing 25 Miles

There is under construction or is now completed, nearly twenty-five miles of new concrete roads in this county. The 1921 road building schedule has been exceedingly heavy and the work has been pushed with considerable alacrity this year, resulting in construction of new concrete at the rate of half a mile a day on the combined contracts which are being done by the Hedges Construction Co. of Chicago on the Harneys Corners-Auburndale, Wausau Iron Works, two miles south from Auburndale and the Kramp Construction Co., Berlin, from the point west of the city on route 13 west to Senaca Corners. The construction companies have employed 300 men and fifty teams. Six mixers were in use. The county has also employed 150 men and 70 teams for the grading and other road improvement work.

Grade Many Roads

Wood county has graded and kept all the main roads from the county line boundaries inland in good shape, which includes grading of the road south of Kellner, State Trunk Highway 73, which makes it one of the best highways in the county. Work on all County trunk lines has been kept in good shape by the patrolman. The committee was well pleased to report the good work. Thus it may be seen that the County has cared for all roads as well as providing concrete highway. Wood county roads are regarded generally as far more advanced than most of the Central Wisconsin counties.

MINERS PROTEST AT INJUNCTION

LEWIS DECLARES GRANTING OF SUIT WOULD BE DEATH BLOW TO UNITED MINE WORKERS UNION

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis, Sept. 24—The filing for a suit for an injunction against the United Mine Workers of the World, in federal court yesterday, brought forth a storm of protest from delegates to the United Mine Workers convention in session here.

President Lewis, in an address before the convention, declared that the very heart and soul of the organization was at stake, and exhorted his hearers to do all in their power to avert what he considered to be a veritable catastrophe to the whole union movement among mine workers.

Vote Resistance

After the completion of President Lewis' address, the convention delegates voted unanimously to resist the granting of the injunction by all lawful means at their disposal.

The injunction was asked by mine operators to prevent coal mining operations being tied up by a threatened strike for higher wages. President Lewis asserted that due to the fact that they are idle a great deal of the time, coal miners make an exceedingly small annual wage in comparison with other trades, and that an increase is needed to insure a proper standard of living among the men.

According to an announcement by the War Finance Corporation yesterday, $15,00,000 will be advanced for agricultural purposes. This money will be available to grain growers holding membership in the Equity Cooperative Exchange operating in the states of Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

The name of the borrower has not been announced. The money will be used to assist members of the Equity Exchange in marketing the wheat crop, which has been held up because of lack of funds to move it.

Officials of the War Finance Corporation intimated that this is the first of a number of large transactions of that nature which will probably be made with cooperative associations in various parts of the country.

REACHED LIMIT WITH SINN FEIN SAYS CHURCHILL

WINSTON CHURCHILL ASSERTS THAT BRITISH GOVERNMENT CAN MAKE NO FURTHER CONCESSIONS TO IRISH.

Dundee, Scotland, Sept. 24—Winston Spencer Churchill, minister of the colonies, speaking here last night, said that the British government had gone to the utmost possible limit in its concessions to Ireland and would go no farther.

Reached Limit

"We have reached the end of our tether," he declared and asserted that if the Sinn Fein rejects the present offer, the British government would have nothing further to propose. He characterized the government's offer of dominion home rule as generous, sincere, and unanimous, and said that it could be carried into effect immediately.

"Allegiance to the king, whether he be called king of Great Britain, or king of Ireland, must be insisted upon," he concluded.

Sinn Fein Never Asked Recognition

London, Sept. 24—Sinn Fein never asked for British recognition of Irish claims to independence as a preliminary condition to a peace conference, according to an interview by Arthur Griffith in the Daily Mail. J. Price, engineer in charge of the Office of Development Work of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United State Department of Agriculture, before the Western Society of Engineers in Chicago, October 3. The explosion was the most destructive of its kind in history, and occurring in a plant that was regarded as a model of elevator construction, it has caused extensive study of the necessity of further perfecting safety systems. Demonstrations of grain dust explosions with a model elevator, and a new film on dust explosions will be shown in connection with the address.

Although many veterans are back with the L. H. S. they will have to hump along this coming week to get in shape for the first regular game. Sideline critics believe that Ritchay has the makings of a good team.

Today was the last opportunity for local nimrods to sally out in pursuit of the elusive prairie chicken.

The five day open season on this species of wild fowl closes this evening at sunset. Hunters who have been out say that it has been one of the best years for chicken in some time. The fact that Wood county is one of the few counties in which chicken shooting is permitted at all has made this vicinity a center of hunting activity at this time of the year.

The season on partridge and spruce hen opens October 4 at sunrise and closes October 8 at sunset. Partridge are always found in woods and bushes while grouse and prairie chickens in habit the open places and grain fields. This rule is a safe guide to hunters in obeying the game laws.

The accident was the result of workmen digging too far under the street without removing the earth that clung to the pavement overhead.

REORGANIZATION C. OF C. ASSURED

BUSINESS MEN SHOWING INTEREST IN PLANS TO KEEP ASSOCIATION AS PERMANENT PART OF CITY

Twelve business men of Wisconsin Rapids who had the welfare of business interests at heart met at the Elks Club on Friday between five and six o'clock and decided for a course of action, which, if carried out, will no doubt be the solution of the Chamber of Commerce problem in this city. It has been proposed to present to the next meeting which is scheduled for next Monday night, to keep the present organization intact and ask the present officers, to hold their term of office until a later date when a committee, which is proposed shall be appointed, and shall have time to report back with definite reorganization plans and offering amendment to the present constitution by-laws to adapt the Chamber of Commerce to local affairs.

Encourage Attendance

Plans were also laid for the encouraging of all members of the Chamber of Commerce to attend the next meeting on Monday night and to raise enthusiasm for the reorganization plans. A committee composed of W. F. Gleue and R. L. Nash was requested to phone each member and urge his attendance at the coming meeting.

Many business men present declared that there was no reason for a lack of interest in the Chamber of Commerce and all agreed that the most advisable move would be to secure an executive secretary for the Chamber of Commerce to devote his entire attention to the affairs of the association. This, however, was only a recommendation of the preliminary meeting and of course will depend largely upon the reorganization plans which will be voted by the Chamber of Commerce members.

To Look After Business

All men present at the preliminary meeting agreed that it was the duty of the business men of Wisconsin Rapids to see that the business interests of the city are carefully preserved and that the duties of reorganized association should not be devoted entirely to attempts to bring new industries to this city, but to care for the institutions which are now here and assisting in the stimulating of general business throughout the community. Such matters as closer cooperation between the cities of the county and the villages surrounding Wisconsin Rapids, were brought out as one of the functions of the new association besides the general business affairs which should come before an association of that kind.

Pauloweit, who has held the pastorate since the organization, has made steady growth and progress. The culmination of this growth in the new church edifice is largely the result of the efforts of the committee on construction, consisting of Fred Panter, chairman; Rev. G. E. Pauloweit, secretary; Wm. F. Gleue, Wm. Eberhardt, Ernest Miller, and Henry Toetzke.

The society is grateful to the many citizens whose assistance helped make possible the new building.

ALL RAFFLES ILLEGAL IS NEW INTERPRETATION

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—It is not necessary that an explanation of a raffle be printed on tickets sold for the affair to make it a lottery under Wisconsin law, the attorney general today advised Ole J. Eggum, district attorney of Whitehall.

Tickets were to be sold to a dance, entitling the holder to a chance in the raffle to be held at the time the affair was given. Nothing was printed on the tickets, but their sale was accompanied by a statement that a piece of valuable property was to be given away.

"In my opinion there is no question but that this would constitute a lottery," the opinion reads. "This seems so plain that I deem no citation necessary."

STATE WILL RECEIVE $4,000,000 OCT. 1

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—Nearly $4,000,000 in taxes and interest on state special funds will be added to the general fund of the treasury on October 1, Henry Johnson, state treasurer announced today. Railroads will pay $3,600,000 of that amount to the state as half of their tax assessment for the year.

Inheritance taxes for the quarter ending October 1 are estimated by Mr. Johnson at $175,000 although he says that they might exceed this total by several thousands of dollars due to late returns. Taxes on inheritances last year brought the state over $1,000,0000. Rates have since been doubled so that nearly $2,000,000 are expected from this source this coming year.

The interest on money deposited in state depositories throughout Wisconsin, which also falls due quarterly, will be $63,600, according to the statement.

Interest on United States Certificates of indebtedness, $2,000,000 of which the state holds, amounts to $26,275 for the quarterly period, making a total interest return of $89,875 which will be added to the state's general fund.

ARPIN TOWN CHAIRMAN BROUGHT BEFORE JUDGE

Jost Altman, chairman of the town of Arpin, was taken into custody by the sheriff on charges preferred by Peter Spike who declared that Altman as chairman of the town, did not exercise his authority in preventing the spreading of swamp and brush pile fires in the township.

Mr. Altman appeared before Judge Getts, offering bonds of $500 and the case was adjourned until October 18. C. E. Briere appeared for the defendant and Dist. Atty. Calkins for the state.

In the cases of Henry Brahmstead and Gust Helke, who were brought before the Judge Friday afternoon for moonshining, both furnished bonds of $500 each and took adjournment until October 17.

FALLING EARTH KNOCKS OUT BRIDGE EMPLOYEE

While he was engaged in excavating for the west side pier of the new bridge, Leo Kenoske, an employe of the Myers company, was knocked unconscious and badly bruised about the head and shoulders by a quantity of earth which fell from the side wall of the cavity under the street.

Kenoske was carried to the construction company's office, where Dr. Edward Hougen attended him. Aside from severe abrasions of the skin and a temporary lameness, Kenoske suffered no serious injuries, and will be able to return to work in a few days.

The accident was the result of workmen digging too far under the street without removing the earth that clung to the pavement overhead.

REORGANIZATION C. OF C. ASSURED

BUSINESS MEN SHOWING INTEREST IN PLANS TO KEEP ASSOCIATION AS PERMANENT PART OF CITY

Twelve business men of Wisconsin Rapids who had the welfare of business interests at heart met at the Elks Club on Friday between five and six o'clock and decided for a course of action, which, if carried out, will no doubt be the solution of the Chamber of Commerce problem in this city. It has been proposed to present to the next meeting which is scheduled for next Monday night, to keept the present organization intact and ask the present officers, to hold their term of office until a later date when a committee, which is proposed shall be appointed, and shall have time to report back with definite reorganization plans and offering amendments to the present constitution by-laws to adapt the Chamber of Commerce to local affairs.

Encourage Attendance

Plans were also laid for the encouraging of all members of the Chamber of Commerce to attend the next meeting on Monday night and to raise enthusiasm for the reorganization plans. A committee composed of W. F. Gleue and R. L. Nash was requested to phone each member and urge his attendance at the coming meeting.

Many business men present declared that there was no reason for a lack of interest in the Chamber of Commerce and all agreed that the most advisable move would be to secure an executive secretary for the Chamber of Commerce to devote his entire attention to the affairs of the association. This, however, was only a recommendation of the preliminary meeting and of course will depend largely upon the reorganization plans which will be voted by the Chamber of Commerce members.

To Look After Business

All men present at the preliminary meeting agreed that it was the duty of the business men of Wisconsin Rapids to see that the business interests of the city are carefully preserved and that the duties of reorganized association should not be devoted entirely to attempts to bring new industries to this city, but to care for the institutions which are now here and assisting in the stimulating of general business throughout the community. Such matters as closer cooperation between the cities of the county and the villages surrounding Wisconsin Rapids, were brought out as one of the functions of the new association besides the general business affairs which should come before an association of that kind.

$500,000 IS NEEDED FOR UNION BUILDING

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—Plans are now being formulated for a campaign to raise $100,000 from new students at the university for the Memorial Union Building which will be constructed in the spring. An effort is also to be made to raise $400,000 from alumni over the state in order to complete the subscription of $1,000,000 needed to complete the proposed building.

WILL DEDICATE CHURCH EDIFICE HERE TOMORROW

NEW EDIFICE OF ST. JOHNS EVANGELICAL WILL BE FORMALLY OPENED WITH SERVICES MORNING AND AFTERNOON

The recently completed St. John's Evangelical Church will be dedicated tomorrow with services both morning and afternoon. Morning services, beginning at 10:00 A. M., will be conducted in German; afternoon services will be in English.

The new church is a handsome brick edifice, located at the corner of Saratoga and Fifth St. Work was commenced in January of 1920, and has been carried to completion by the firm of Jacobson and Manske. The value of the edifice is estimated at $15,000.

Have Outside Speakers

Martin Jacobson, of the firm that built the church, will open the morning service by formally presenting the keys of the church to the congregation. This will be followed by the invocation by the Rev. G. E. Pauloweit, pastor. The Rev. E. Krueger of Sheboygan will preach the morning sermon.

The Rev. E. Grauer of Wausau and Rev. Johannes Rockstroh of St. John's Episcopal church of Wisconsin Rapids will preach at the afternoon services, whic will be conducted in English throughout. Mayor Charles E. Briere will give an address and Martin Jacobson will tell of the construction of the new building. The chairman of the district mission board will give a short talk.

Is Young Society

St. John's Evangelical is one of the youngest churches in Wisconsin Rapids. The society was organized in 1915 but through the consistent work of its members and of Rev. G. E. Pauloweit, who has held the pastorate since the organization, has made steady growth and progress. The culmination of this growth in the new church edifice is largely the result of the efforts of the committee on construction, consisting of Fred Panter, chairman; Rev. G. E. Pauloweit, secretary; Wm. F. Gleue, Wm. Eberhardt, Ernest Miller, and Henry Toetzke.

The society is grateful to the many citizens whose assistance helped make possible the new building.

ALL RAFFLES ILLEGAL IS NEW INTERPRETATION

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—It is not necessary that an explanation of a raffle be printed on tickets sold for the affair to make it a lottery under Wisconsin law, the attorney general today advised Ole J. Eggum, district attorney of Whitehall.

Tickets were to be sold to a dance, entitling the holder to a chance in the raffle to be held at the time the affair was given. Nothing was printed on the tickets, but their sale was accompanied by a statement that a piece of valuable property was to be given away.

"In my opinion there is no question but that this would constitute a lottery," the opinion reads. "This seems so plain that I deem no citation necessary."

PROBLEM OF JOBS

Those who have never been out of a job, without money and without friends to whom appeal may be made, cannot appreciate the position in which thousands of able-bodied men now find themselves. It has been said that the best recipe for getting a job is to have one. A man who has work finds it easier to get other work, is another way of stating the idea. Perhaps this explains why it is so difficult for the jobless to get placed again. When places are so scarce there is difficulty in locating a prospect.

Hunting at random for work is likely to be fruitless, yet a reporter in New York who started out to test the matter was offered three jobs in three hours. All of them involved manual labor, of course, yet it is to that which a great percentage of those unemployed would need have recourse. The sincere seeker after work will accept anything which is not beyond his abilities, if it promises food. He will not quibble over the pay, if he is hungry, but will pitch in hoping that the offer will prove a stepping stone to something better.

Unfortunately it is those the least capable who suffer the most in a time like the present. Such, even when employed, receive the least remuneration and have the scantiest resources when thrown out by a recession of industry. It is a hard fate but the problem of helping those who cannot help themselves has never been fully solved. The capable worker who is thrifty lays by in times of plenty for the day when there may be less.

WORRYING ABOUT A WIFE

The travels of the young Prince of Wales, soon to be extended to India and Japan, have created an intimate personal interest in his affairs throughout the empire, and no detail arouses more comment than the delay in finding him a wife. He is past 27, with no sign of a bride being chosen, and his loyal subjects think it high time something was being done. A column in the Toronto Mail and Empire devoted to the subject remarks that despite the widespread hope that he may wed of his own choice, the British royal marriage act still stands unamended and forbids his marrying anyone not of royal blood. The relations between "Willy" and "Nicky" and other royalties on the eve of the war disposed forever of the old idea of royal marriages strengthening alliances and making for peace. Besides the overthrow of so many thrones has limited the royal eligibles to a very few.

There is a further hope throughout the empire that the young prince will eventually find his own solution by picking a bride of his own choice, regardless of marriage nets. If he does there is reason to believe parliament, if necessary, will be glad to amend the archaic act and the people to approve.

BABY TALK

An appeal has been made by the school authorities of Cincinnati to the mothers of that city to enlist in a war against "baby talk" and teach their children, and a number have enlisted to carry the cause to the mothers' clubs.

While much of the talk with which fond mothers beguile their babies may sound very foolish to others it seems to sound good to the baby and with the claim that it makes [illegible] causes other defects in [illegible] have some truth in it, the [illegible] will bear comparison with [illegible] talk heard by children.

While good speech is important the matter is of more importance than the manner; in fact good manners naturally tend to good [illegible] speech. It is at least quite important that parents, fathers as well as mothers, are careful to select the right subject matter for talk before their children and that baby talk be eliminated.

Try as they may the teachers are likely to have a hard time anyway to convince many mothers that baby talk is not the proper language in which to address the baby, both as to subject matter and method of speech.

BAR REMOVAL POINT NOT HELD IMPORTANT

Madison, Wis.—The question of bar removal or alteration under the Severson prohibition enforcement law is not regarded by state officers as of vital importance to successful regulation of soft-drink parlors, according to expression by them.

The informal expression of Judge E. Ray Stevens, in circuit court, testing out provisions of the statute, that removal or alteration is not required under the law, is not expected to be contested in the higher court, when the formal decision is made.

Although bars could be maintained, no liquors could be consumed or sold over them and the same requirement with regard to service at tables would be continued. This latter requirement is regarded of special importance by the prohibition commissioner, who testified before Judge Stevens that sale at bars was a hindrance often to effective enforcement because of the ease with which evidence could be destroyed by the bar-tender.

A contest is seen over the licensing features of the new law. Should it be held by Judge Stevens that the statute requires all places selling beverages with a perceptible amount of alcohol to be licensed, it is said that a complicated enforcement situation will result.

RALLY METHODISTS TO SUPPORT DISARMAMENT

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 24—An urgent request that Methodism rally to the support of President Harding and the Secretary of State in his call for a Disarmament Conference and for the American disarmament policies is being urged here today by Bishop W. F. McDowell, Washington, D. C. who is visiting and addressing the Michigan and other Methodist Conferences. At every Conference Bishop McDowell is expressing a desire that the Methodists assemble in the conference and that in the churches also there should be a special prayer for disarmament.

Bishop McDowell was chairman of the Committee of Methodist Chaplains throughout the war and also for some years Bishop of Chicago, prior to his assignment at Washington.

"We ought especially to uphold the hands of the President and the Secretary of State that their lofty and patriotic purposes may be crowned with the approval of the world and the favor of the God of Nations," said Bishop McDowell.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS ARE TIRED OF BOLSHEVISM

Vladivostok—Leading peasant members of the local assembly have issued a memorial which declares that they are weary of dictatorship, Bolshevism, political adventurers and reactionaries and want a true democracy which will end the civil war that is tearing Russia to pieces.

The statement urges the convocation of a truly representative constituent assembly which will lead to a strong and united Russian government and make it possible for the people to work calmly for the reconstruction of destroyed homes and for a mighty and free Russia. It declares the signers are ready to support in the Far East a democratic republic with a national assembly elected on the basis of general voting with proportional representation and without conditions as to religions, national or political views.

OSTEOPATHS ARE FREE TO PRACTICE—MORGAN

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—Osteopaths in Wisconsin who have satisfactorily passed the authorized state examination in surgery, are entitled to practice without restriction, Attorney General Morgan tells Dr. J. M. Dodd, secretary of the state board of medical examiners today, in an opinion.

Question had been raised as to the kind of license to be granted osteopaths who had successfully passed the examination. The Attorney General says that it is not necessary that the applicant have gone through the regular internship provided he has presented a diploma from a reputable college of osteopathy and surgery, and has passed the prescribed examination.

No member of the board, or the board in general, can arbitrarily withhold from any applicant a license when the conditions prescribed by statute have been complied with, the ruling says.

BAR REMOVAL POINT NOT HELD IMPORTANT

Madison, Wis.—The question of bar removal or alteration under the Severson prohibition enforcement law is not regarded by state officers as of vital importance to successful regulation of soft-drink parlors, according to expression by them.

The informal expression of Judge E. Ray Stevens, in circuit court, testing out provisions of the statute, that removal or alteration is not required under the law, is not expected to be contested in the higher court, when the formal decision is made.

Although bars could be maintained, no liquors could be consumed or sold over them and the same requirement with regard to service at tables would be continued. This latter requirement is regarded of special importance by the prohibition commissioner, who testified before Judge Stevens that sale at bars was a hindrance often to effective enforcement because of the ease with which evidence could be destroyed by the bar-tender.

A contest is seen over the licensing features of the new law. Should it be held by Judge Stevens that the statute requires all places selling beverages with a perceptible amount of alcohol to be licensed, it is said that a complicated enforcement situation will result.

RALLY METHODISTS TO SUPPORT DISARMAMENT

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 24—An urgent request that Methodism rally to the support of President Harding and the Secretary of State in his call for a Disarmament Conference and for the American disarmament policies is being urged here today by Bishop W. F. McDowell, Washington, D. C. who is visiting and addressing the Michigan and other Methodist Conferences. At every Conference Bishop McDowell is expressing a desire that the Methodists assemble in the conference and that in the churches also there should be a special prayer for disarmament.

Bishop McDowell was chairman of the Committee of Methodist Chaplains throughout the war and also for some years Bishop of Chicago, prior to his assignment at Washington.

"We ought especially to uphold the hands of the President and the Secretary of State that their lofty and patriotic purposes may be crowned with the approval of the world and the favor of the God of Nations," said Bishop McDowell.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS ARE TIRED OF BOLSHEVISM

Vladivostok—Leading peasant members of the local assembly have issued a memorial which declares that they are weary of dictatorship, Bolshevism, political adventurers and reactionaries and want a true democracy which will end the civil war that is tearing Russia to pieces.

The statement urges the convocation of a truly representative constituent assembly which will lead to a strong and united Russian government and make it possible for the people to work calmly for the reconstruction of destroyed homes and for a mighty and free Russia. It declares the signers are ready to support in the Far East a democratic republic with a national assembly elected on the basis of general voting with proportional representation and without conditions as to religions, national or political views.

OSTEOPATHS ARE FREE TO PRACTICE—MORGAN

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24—Osteopaths in Wisconsin who have satisfactorily passed the authorized state examination in surgery, are entitled to practice without restriction, Attorney General Morgan tells Dr. J. M. Dodd, secretary of the state board of medical examiners today, in an opinion.

Question had been raised as to the kind of license to be granted osteopaths who had successfully passed the examination. The Attorney General says that it is not necessary that the applicant have gone through the regular internship provided he has presented a diploma from a reputable college of osteopathy and surgery, and has passed the prescribed examination.

No member of the board, or the board in general, can arbitrarily withhold from any applicant a license when the conditions prescribed by statute have been complied with, the ruling says.

An attachment that can be fastened to any typewriter has been invented that rings a warning bell when a typist nears the bottom of a sheet of paper.

GRANT SANCTION FOR BILLIARD TOURNAMENT

By PETER P. CARNEY
Secretary National Billiard Association.

Sanction has been granted by the National Billiard Association of America for the holding of the National Three cushion Carom Billiard Tournament to be held in Pittsburgh, October 3 to 22; for the National Pocket Billiard championship tournament to be staged in Philadelphia beginning October 17, and concluding November 5 and for the world's championship 18.2 balk line tournament to be held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, beginning November 14 and concluding November 19.

Never before in the history of billiards was a tournament sanctioned. It is the purpose of the National Billiard Association of America to grant sanctions for all tournaments, city, state, or national, and to keep a record of all tournaments played. In this way records of billiards will be maintained. To this time there are no official billiard records. There is nothing to prevent any one from claiming a record any time, or hasn't been, but records hereafter will have to be approved by the national body.

It costs nothing for an organization to procure a sanction, the only thing the national association asks is that each player be a member, and with the dues at 10 cents this doesn't appear to be a hardship.

It will only be a matter of time when the state organizations that are now in existence will be merged with the National Association. All State Associations formed in the future will be formed by the National Body as with the formation of the National Association the National Billiard Advisory Board has gone out of business.

This 18.2 tournament in Chicago is the first world's championship tournament in 18 years.

MICHIGAN BACK-FIELD IS STRONG THIS YEAR

Ann Arbor, Mich.—The University of Michigan has the best football material in years and its prospects for a winning team are bright, in the opinion of Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University, and for many years mentor of the Maize and Blue gridiron squads.

Michigan's strength this year will be the backfield, Yost believes. He has a number of men of proved ability for these positions. Steketee, Usher, Paper, Kipke, Roby, Fairbairn, Dean, Dunphy, Banks, Uteritz and Knobe are the more widely known players in this group. Landowski of Milwaukee also is looked upon as promising material in the department.

His partner appeared to approve of the expression, for he nodded seven-ly and then used it himself. "No, you bet it isn't any child's play!" he said.

"No, sir," Henry Rooter again agreed. "Newspaper work like this isn't any child's play at all!"

"It isn't any child's play, Florence," said Herbert. "It ain't any child's play at all, Florence. If it was just child's play or something like that, why it wouldn't matter so much your always pokin' up here, and—"

"Well," the partner interrupted, judicially. "We wouldn't want her around, even if it was child's play."

"No, we wouldn't; that's so," Herbert agreed.

"We wouldn't want you around, anyhow, Florence." Here his tone became more plaintive. "So, for mercy's sakes, can't you go on home and give us a little rest? What you want, anyhow?"

"Well, I guess it's about time you was askin' me that," she said, not unreasonably. "If you'd asked me that in the first place, instead of actin' like you'd never been taught anything, and was only fit to associate with hoodlums, perhaps my time is of some value, myself!"

The lack of rhetorical cohesion was largely counteracted by the strong expressiveness of tone and manner; at all events, Florence made perfectly clear her position as a person of worth, dealing with the lowest of all her inferiors. She went on, not pausing:

"I thought, being as I was related to you, and all the family and everybody else goin' to haf to read your ole newspaper, anyway it'd be a good thing if what was printed in it wasn't all a disgrace to the family, because the name of our family's got mixed up with this newspaper; so here!"

Thus speaking, she took the poem from her pocket and with dignity held it forth to her cousin.

"What's that?" Herbert inquired, not moving a hand. He was but an amateur, yet already enough of an editor to have his suspicions.

"It's a poem," Florence said. "I don't know whether I exackly ought to have it in your ole newspaper or not, but on account of the family's sake I guess I better. Here, take it."

Herbert at once withdrew a few steps, placing his hands behind him. "Listen, here," he said, "you think we got time to read a lot o' writin' in your ole handwritin' that nobody can read anyhow, and then go to work and toil and moil to print it on the printin' press? I guess we got work enough printin' what we wrote for our newspaper our own selves! My goodness, Florence, I told you this isn't any child's play!"

Florence appeared to be somewhat baffled. "Well," she said. "Well, you better put this poem in your ole newspaper if you want to have anyhow one thing in it that won't make everybody sick that reads it."

"I won't do it!" Herbert said, more firmly.

"What you take us for?" his partner added, convincingly.

"All right, then," Florence responded, with apparent decisiveness. "I'll go back and tell Uncle Joseph and he'll take this printing press back."

"He will not take it back. I already did tell him how you keep pokin' around tryin' to run everything, and we just worried our lifes out tryin' to keep you away. He said he bet it was a hard job; that's what Uncle Joseph said. So go on, tell him anything you want to. You don't get yor ole poem in our newspaper!"

"Not if she lived to be two hundred years old!" Henry Rooter added. Then he had an afterthought. "Not unless she pays for it."

"How do you mean?" Herbert asked, puzzled.

Henry's brow had become corrugated with no little professional impressiveness. "You know what we were talkin' about this morning," he said. "How the right way to run our newspaper, we ought to have some advertisements in it and everything. Well, we want money, don't we? We could put this poem in our newspaper like an advertisement; that is, if Florence has got any money, we could."

Herbert frowned. "If her ole poem isn't too long. I guess we could. Here, let's see it, Florence." And, taking the sheet of paper in his hand, he studied the dimensions of the poem, though without pausing himself to read it. "Well, I guess, maybe we can do it," he said. "How much ought we to charge her?"

This question plunged Henry Rooter into a state of calculation, while Florence observed him with veiled anxiety; but after a time he looked up, his brow showing continued strain. "Do you keep a bank, Florence—for nickels and dimes and maybe quarters, you know?" he inquired.

It was her cousin who impulsively replied for her. "No, she don't," he said.

"Not since I was about seven years old!" Florence added sharply, though with dignity. "Do you still make mud pies in your back yard, pray?"

"Now, see here!" Henry objected. "Try and be a lady anyway for a few minutes, can't you? I got to figure out how much we got to charge you for your ole poem, don't I?"

"Well, then," Florence returned, "you better ask me somep'm about that, hadn't you?"

"Well," said Henry Rooter, "have you got any money at home?"

"No, I haven't."

"Have you got any money with you?"

"Yes, I have."

"How much is it?"

"I won't tell you."

Henry frowned. "I guess we ought to make her pay about two dollars and a half," he said, turning to his partner.

Herbert felt deferential; it seemed to him that he had formed a business association with a genius, and for a moment he was dazzled; then he remembered Florence's financial capacities, always well known to him, and he looked depressed. Florence, herself, looked indignant.

"Two dollars and a half!" she cried. "Why, I could buy this whole place for two dollars and a half, printing press, rolling, and all—yes, and you thrown in, Mister Henry Rooter!"

"See here, Florence," Henry said earnestly, "haven't you got two dollars and a half?"

"Of course she hasn't!" his partner assured him. "She never had two dollars and a half in her life!"

"Well, then," said Henry gloomily, "what we goin' to do about it? How much you think we ought to charge her?"

Herbert's expression became noncommittal. "Just let me think a minute," he said; and with his hand to his brow stepped behind the unsuspicious Florence.

"I got to think," he murmured; then with the straightforwardness of his age, he suddenly seized his damsel around from the rear and held her in a tight but far from affectionate embrace, pinioning her arms. She shrieked, "Murder!" and "Let me go!" and "Help! Hay-yulp!"

"Look in her pocket," Herbert shouted. "She keeps her money in her skirt pocket when she's got any. It's on the left side of her. Don't let her kick you! Look out!"

"I got it!" said the dexterous Henry, retreating and exhibiting coins. "It's one dime and two nickels—twenty cents. Has she got any more pockets?"

"No, I haven't!" Florence fiercely informed him, as Herbert released

"Look in Her Pocket," Herbert Shouted, "Don't Let Her Kick You!"

her. "And I guess you better hand that money back if you don't want to be arrested for stealing!"

Henry was unmoved. "Twenty cents," he said calculatingly. "Well, all right; it isn't much, but you can have your poem in our newspaper for twenty cents, Florence. If you don't want to pay that much, why take your ole twenty cents and go on away!"

"Yes," said Herbert. "That's as cheap as we'll do it, Florence. Take it or leave it."

"Take it or leave it," Henry Rooter agreed. "That's the way to talk to her; take it, or leave it, Florence. If you don't take it you got to leave it."

Florence was indignant, but she decided to take it. "All right," she said coldly. "I wouldn't pay another cent if I died for it."

"Well, you haven't got another cent, so that's all right," Mr. Rooter retorted; and he honorably extended the open palm, supporting the coins, toward his partner. "Here, Herbert: you can have the dime, or the two nickels, whichever you rather have. It makes no difference to me; I'd as soon have one as the other."

Herbert took the two nickels, and turned to Florence. "See here, Florence," he said, in a tone of strong complaint. "This business is all done and paid for now. What you want to come around here any more for?"

"Yes, Florence," his partner faithfully seconded him at once. "We haven't got any more time to waste around here today, and so what you want to stand around in the way and everything for? You ought to know yourself we don't want you."

"I'm not in the way," said Florence hotly. "Whose way am I in?"

"Well, anyhow, if you don't go," Herbert informed her, "we'll carry you downstairs and lock you out."

"I'd just like to see you!" she returned, her eyes flashing. "Just you dare to lay a finger on me again!" And she added, "Anyway, if you did, those ole doors haven't got any lock on 'em. I'll come right straight in and walk right straight up the stairs again!"

Herbert advanced toward her. "Now you pay attention to me," he said. "You've paid for your ole poem, and we got to have some peace around here. I'm goin' straight over to your mother and ask her to come and get you."

Florence gave up. "What difference would that make, Mister Taddletale?" she inquired mockingly. "I wouldn't be here when she came, would I? I'll thank you to notice there's some value to my time, myself; and I'll just politely ask you to excuse me, pray!"

With a proud air, she crushingly departed; and returned to her own home, far from dissatisfied with what she had accomplished. Moreover, she began to expand with the realization of a new importance; and she was gratified with the effect upon her parents, at dinner that evening, when she informed them that she had written a poem which was to be published in the prospective first number of the North End Daily Oriole.

"Written a poem?" said her father. "Well, I declare! Why, that's remarkable, Florence!"

"I'm glad the boys were nice about it," said her mother. "I should have feared they couldn't appreciate it, after being so cross to you about letting you have anything to do with the printing press. They must have thought it was a very good poem."

"Where is the poem, Florence?" Mr. Atwater asked. "Let's read it and see what our little girl can do."

FASHION NOTES

Simple New Wraps

London— Simplicity is carried to the utmost in a new wrap recently designed here. The only complicated thing about this garment lies in giving it a name, for it is neither cape, coat nor scarf, yet has something of each. It consists of a long, straight double piece of brushed wool material, 48 inches wide. The ends are furnished with button holes and elegant large pearl buttons. This piece of material is draped across the material and pulled down in the back and the lower ends brought around to the front and buttoned to the upper ends at the waistline. The arms are thrust through the openings left at the outside by the spacing of the buttons.

Neck Line

New York—To the daguerrotypes of 1830 may be traced the designs for the latest patterns of lingerie which have just reached this country. These are differentiated by the off the shoulder neck line and the very brief puff or ruffle sleeve. One gown of this type has a lace Berthe some three or four inches in width which emphasizes this neckline. The sleeves are merely wide lace ruffles set directly in the armholes. A new type of embroidery suggestive of the open work Swedish darning stitch appears on a set of maize colored voile. This is drawn right out of the cloth and a pattern darned in in white. Negligees and underslings stress the low waistline by means of wide bands of lace insertion or by drawn work and fagoting.

Fall Suits

Deauville, France— One of the most striking and characteristic of the French fall suits was worn here this week, by a well known French actress. It was of a woolen cheviot weave in a warm beige shade. The skirt is plain and straight and hangs about 10 inches from the ground. The paletot is sleeveless of hip length and worn over a full sleeved blouse of beige crepe de chine. The collar was high in the back with wide reverses. Gloves, hosiery, and shoes matched the costume with which was worn a toque of brown velvet with pin, with ornamental glass beads the only trimming.

Gay Sleeves Popular

London, Mon.—Sleeves have grown rampantly gay on the newest frocks being worn at the opening of the fall season here. These sleeves are both long and wide and some seem unrelated to the dress itself, being both of different material and color. Some of the longer sleeve designs are gathered at the wrist by bands of beads, bid discs, fine ribbon or coral embroidery. Other sleeves are of two materials, the back portion of same material with the dress and the front of net, lace or bright colored crepe. Skirts too have taken on width, length and trimmings and are beginning to show insertions, pin tucks, hopping petals, frills, lace, fur and other embellishments.

THEATRES

PALACE THEATER

It has taken "Midsummer Madness" for William DeMille to show his qualities of showmanship and artistic appreciation. He has taken a more or less prosaic story and made it palpitate with life. He plays upon the heart-strings much after the manner of a Kreisler. But as skillful as he has shown himself to be in humanizing a story, his ability to construct dramatic sequences and dovetail them together stamps him as an exceptional technician.

"Midsummer Madness" is the most perfectly built picture that has ever been flashed on the screen. The whole structure—the incidents, the action—these move with remarkable precision, and not a superfluous note mars the offering from inception to conclusion. Olga Printzlau, the scenarist, deserves a great deal of credit. If she is responsible for the titling, then she could take equal credit with DeMille. Titles can make or break a picture. Those incorporated here have a definite place and carry the action along with faultless tempo.

It is a rare scene when the outraged husband and the other's wife give utterance to their suspicions. The quarrel is dynamic in its force and is splendidly executed. This is only a sample of the inspired direction. DeMille has given emphasis to the dramatic side and has left the spectacular alone. As a result the picture presents the most direct line of continuity ever shown. The picture is excellently staged and acted. Jack Holt, as the indifferent husband, and Conrad Nagel as the philanderer, give performances in the key of understanding and feeling. Lila Lee surpasses herself as the outraged wife. Her portrayal will surprise many who thought her incapable of emotion. Lois Wilson acts with admirable force and restraint. The supporting players are equally good in minor roles. "Midsummer Madness" is a sample of how good direction can make a picture. It should go big everywhere. Length 7 reels.

IDEAL THEATER

Juvenile Screen Stars

That the day when the kiddies will shine in the film world is here has been evinced by the number of successful photoplays in which children have featured roles. For instance, "Dinty," which stars Wesley Barry, has enjoyed a highly successful engagement. "The Woman in His House," which gives Richard Headrick an important part, also has established a success. Little Ben Alexander is another youthful star whose name appears in featured position on cast titles. Others of equal importance can be mentioned, such as George Beban, Jr., affectionately known as "Bob White", Robbie Kelso, and Johnnie Jones.

And now comes the latest child celebrity—Jackie Coogan, who was made famous in the Chaplin picture, "The Kid," and who will be seen in the star and title role of "Peck's Bad Boy," released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., at the Ideal Theater. Although he has appeared in but two photoplays, Jackie Coogan is the most talked-about youngster in the world today. His name is on the lips of every movie fan. And his work has put him in a honored position in their hearts.

In "Peck's Bad Boy" Jackie is given every opportunity to display his marvelous talents. And Jackie has taken advantage of these opportunities in no mean manner. Those who have seen the "Peck" film claim his portrayal of the bad boy easily equals his work as "The Kid."

Jackie Coogan has proven that the day for child stars has arrived. This little fellow has commanded as much attention from the amusement lovers as the best and seasoned players. The Reason? Because Jackie's portrayals are natural. He does not act. Every move he makes is undirected. His director explains the action wanted. Jackie does the rest. It is seldom indeed that scenes in which he appears have to be remade. At the present time, Jackie Coogan can easily claim the friendship of more people than any other child—or adult for that matter—in the world.

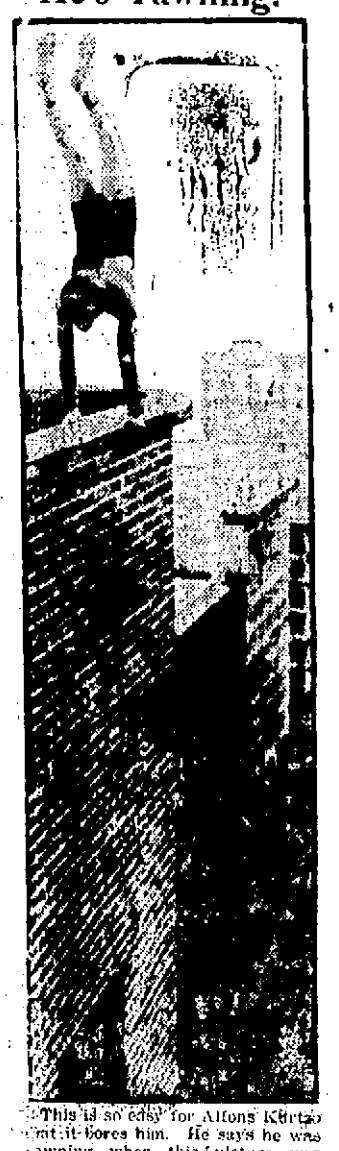
He's Yawning!



This is so easy for Alfons Kurtzo that it bores him. He says he was yawning when this picture was taken. Down below New York crowds held their breath as they watched Kurtzo 28 stories above on the McAlpin roof. Kurtzo, a noted acrobat, is assistant physical director of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A.

New Fans Are Gorgeous!

Fine feathers may not make fine birds but they certainly make fine fans. Never has the gorgeous fan been so in evidence. Among Lord & Taylor's imports, one brilliant novelty is of red and black coque feathers. The single handle spreads the feathers in the new one-sided effect. Bird breasts and quills are used in another original red and black fan. The gorgeous ostrich tip runs into the most stunning fans of all types.

VAUDEVILLE STARS SHARE PROGRAMS WITH PRIZE STOCK AT CANADIAN EXHIBITIONS

Vancouver's 1921 Exhibition numbers the Prince of Wales among its exhibitors, for two rams and two ewes yearlings, have been entered from his Pekisko, Alberta ranch. Though owned by royalty, these sheep stand on a democratic footing and must prove their superiority if they win a prize.

The District Exhibition, a Canadian cousin to the American County Fair is the annual social event of Canada's rural communities. All over the provinces these friendly competitions are staged during the late summer. With the increase of wealth among Canadian farmers, there is a corresponding elevation to the tone of these Exhibitions. Crude pavilions give way to substantial buildings. Evening horse shows attract immense audiences and are social events.

Attendance at one of these Exhibitions will prove an eye-opener to any American who harbors an idea that Canadian farmers live 'mid frontier hardships. Vast pavilions crowded with pure bred stock—white faced Hereford and stocky Angus Shorthorn cattle, Karakul and Rambouliette sheep, massive Percheron and Clydesdale horses; other pavilions containing extensive displays of wheat and various grains, fruits and vegetables, prove that the northwest is a land of plenty. The acres upon acres of parked automobiles in which the farmers have come to the gala-fest are proof that the land of plenty has filled the farmers' pockets with wealth.

Excellent show bills are put on at these exhibitions and the visiting New Yorker will be surprised to find vaudeville teams familiar to Broadway, performing on a great open-air stage for the entertainment of an audience of twenty or thirty thousand packed into a huge grandstand. Particularly fortunate will be the visitor who chooses an exhibition where the local Royal Canadian Mounted Police are on the program, for they furnish most spectacular displays of horsemanship.

Miss Ruth Bennett

RUTH CARRIE BENNETT

Miss Ruth Carrie Bennett, County Superintendent of Schools of Wood county, who holds the distinction of being the first woman in the county elected to a county office, is fully proving her ability, successfully serving what has always been considered a "full sized man's job." Miss Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bennett, was born on the Bennett Cranberry marsh, in the town of Port Edwards, or Cranmoor, June 2, 1892.

Studied in County Schools

Her early education was received in the country school near her home. She later attended the Lincoln High School of this city, where she was graduated under the late H. S. Youker with the class of 1908.

After graduating here, Miss Bennett attended the State Normal at Stevens Point for two years.

Taught at Granton

Her first experience as a teacher was in the state graded school at Granton where she taught for two years. The greater part of the year 1913 Miss Bennett spent with a party of friends in a cottage at Biloxi, Miss. The two years following her return she was a teacher in the grammar room in the village school at Mosinee.

Principal at Boaz

In 1918 she was engaged as principal in the state graded school at Boaz, but before the termination of the school year, she was transferred to Biron to fill the principalship of the school in that village, which was made vacant by the former principal, Martin Zelimer who had been drafted into service in the late war. Miss Bennett was engaged to fill the same position at the Biron school the following year.

The next two years found her as principal of the state graded school at Rudolph. During the summers of 1918-19-20 she attended the summer sessions of the state university at Madison. Previous to the spring election of 1921, Miss Bennett was urged to become a candidate for county superintendent of schools for this county.

Received Large Majority

She was elected by a big majority over her opponent Robert Morris who had served the office for eleven years previous. Miss Bennett's duties involve much hard work which she skillfully masters. During the major part of her term she may be found in her office at the Wood County Normal School. The second Saturday of each month she is at work in Marshfield where she has an office at the Mansion House.

Unusually Qualified

With her educational knowledge and her experience as a teacher, Miss Bennett is unusually qualified to perform the duties her office demands. She is assisted in her work by two school supervisors, Miss Ella Hessler of Vesper and Miss Clara Farrell of Milladore, who were recommended by the Educational Committee of the County Board of Supervisors, and the work under these three capable women, with Miss Bennett at the head, is being carried on in a thoroughly systematic and successful manner. She has deservedly gained the reputation of being one of the best superintendents ever had in Wood county.

Fine Christian Woman

She is a firm believer in the Christian faith, although not belonging to any creed. She was among the first women to cast her vote at the last election and believes woman suffrage to be the key to solve the problem by which means the ballot will be uplifted and strengthened.

Miss Bennett is a member of Rainbow Chapter No. 87 Order of Eastern Star of Wisconsin Rapids. She is not a member of any club either literary or social, her work demanding almost her entire time and attention.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

Columbus, O.—The Brewers and Senators ran into the Grand circuit on the opening day of their series, and only 400 of the faithful saw the Egans cop the opened by a 5 to 4 count after a hard battle.

Indianapolis—Minneapolis defeated Indianapolis in the opener of the series here on Friday, 5 to 3. Lowdermilk was wild and passed twelve men, but kept his hits well scattered.

Louisville—Louisville lost the first game with St. Paul, 7 to 5, in ten innings, through poor base running. Riggert's single in the tenth drove in the winning runs.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York—Splendid pitching by White Hoyt and strong hitting by Babe Ruth and Walter Pipp enabled the New York Americans to win the first of an all important four game series with Cleveland on Friday by a score of 4 to 2.

Hoyt was in trouble in only one inning, the fourth, when Cleveland scored its two runs on Gardner's single, Sewell's triple and a wild pitch. In the last five innings Cleveland only got three men on bases.

Washington, D. C.—Mogridge pitched Washington to a victory over Detroit, 2 to 1, in a duel with Leonard on Friday. A single by Judge scored the winning run in the ninth after the bases had been loaded by Goslin's safety and a pair of passes.

Philadelphia took both ends of a double header from Chicago on Friday by scores of 4 to 0 and 9 to 1.

Boston—The Browns and Red Sox divided a double header on Friday, St. Louis winning the opener, 10 to 2, and Boston the second, 10 to 5.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Chicago—Chicago hit McQuillan hard behind erratic support and easily defeated Boston 13 to 5. Chicago used most of its recruit players, including Charles Kaufman, a pitcher obtained from Winnipeg, who pitched in fine form, experiencing only one bad inning.

Pittsburg—Hamilton's effective pitching enabled Pittsburg to defeat Philadelphia on Friday, 2 to 0. King's batting and fielding featured the contest. The locals scored a run in the first inning on a pass to Bigbee, who was forced by Carey, and the latter scored on Robertson's double. The second run was scored on Maranville's single, his steal of second and Tierney's single.

VALLEY CHAMPIONSHIP IS STILL UNDECIDED

Prospects for an early settlement of the Marshfield-Stevens Point brawl over the Wisconsin valley base ball championship seem to be poor.

The Point club, as valley champions, have been attempting to arrange games with Fox River valley and Lake Shore League teams for the state semi-pro title. This aroused the ire of the Marshfield club, which asserts that by dropping out of the valley league before the end of the season the Point athletes forfeited all claim to the championship.

Stevens Point replied with a challenge to meet the Marshfield nine in a series of games to decide the matter right out on the ball field. Indications at present seem to be that Marshfield will rest content to a paper claim to the valley title.

LOCAL ATHLETE LEADS LAWRENCE FOOTBALLERS

Bill Smith, who starred with the local high school team some years ago, has been elected captain of the Lawrence college football team for the coming year.

Altogether, four local boys are playing with the Appleton college team this year. These, in addition to Smith, are Don McGlynn, Roy Normington and Stanley Stark. The election of McGlynn as chairman of the Junior Rock Committee at Lawrence has just been announced.

HUDSON
SUPER SIX
Now Saves You
$705 to $955

Hudson is always included in that small group, which men consciously or not, classify as the really great cars.

But do you ever think how much less Hudson costs than its companion leaders?

Do you realize that even when the Super-Six last year sold for $2600, it was from $1200 to $1500 under-priced for the field in which it ranked by performance, quality, reliability and distinction?

A Distinctive Price Advantage

Never was Hudson's price advantage over cars of comparable quality so striking as now. It is in all respects as great a car, and in many refinements even greater than last year's Super-Six. And think, that then, at $2600 it outsold all fine cars, as it had done for five years previously.

Now with Hudson at the medium price of $1895 does any higher-priced car offer qualities to warrant their vastly increased price differential?

And of the cars in its new price range is there one that you ever even distantly associated with Hudson in any wanted quality?

Now $1895

His partner appeared to approve of the expression, for he nodded severely and then used it himself. "No, you bet it isn't any child's play!" he said.

"No, sir," Henry Rooter again agreed. "Newspaper work like this isn't any child's play at all!"

"It isn't any child's play, Florence," said Herbert. "It ain't any child's play at all, Florence. If it was just child's play or something like that, why it wouldn't matter so much your always pokin' up here, and—"

"Well," the partner interrupted, judicially, "We wouldn't want her around, even if it was child's play."

"No, we wouldn't; that's so," Herbert agreed.

"We wouldn't want you around, anyhow, Florence." Here his tone became more plaintive. "So, for mercy's sakes, can't you go on home and give us a little rest? What you want, anyhow?"

"Well, I guess it's about time you was askin' me that," she said, not unreasonably. "If you'd asked me that in the first place, instead of actin' like you'd never been taught anything, and was only fit to associate with hoodlums, perhaps my time is of some value, myself!"

The lack of rhetorical cohesion was largely counteracted by the strong expressiveness of tone and manner; at all events, Florence made perfectly clear her position as a person of worth, dealing with the lowest of all her inferiors. She went on, not pausing:

"I thought, being as I was related to you, and all the family and everybody else goin' to haf to read your ole newspaper, anyway it'd be a good thing if what was printed in it wasn't all a disgrace to the family, because the name of our family's got mixed up with this newspaper; so here!"

Thus speaking, she took the poem from her pocket and with dignity held it forth to her cousin.

"What's that?" Herbert inquired, not moving a hand. He was but an amateur, yet already enough of an editor to have his suspicions.

"It's a poem," Florence said. "I don't know whether I exackly ought to have it in your ole newspaper or not, but on account of the family's sake I guess I better. Here, take it."

Herbert at once withdrew a few steps, placing his hands behind him. "Listen, here," he said, "you think we got time to read a lot o' writin' in your ole handwritin' that nobody can read anyhow, and then go to work and toil and moil to print it on the printin' press? I guess we got work enough printin' what we wrote for our newspaper our own selves! My goodness, Florence, I told you this isn't any child's play!"

Florence appeared to be somewhat baffled. "Well," she said. "Well, you better put this poem in your ole newspaper if you want to have anyhow one thing in it that won't make everybody sick that reads it."

"I won't do it!" Herbert said, more firmly.

"What you take us for?" his partner added, convincingly.

"All right, then," Florence responded, with apparent decisiveness. "I'll go back and tell Uncle Joseph and he'll take this printing press back."

"He will not take it back. I already did tell him how you keep pokin' around tryin' to run everything, and we just worried our lifes out tryin' to keep you away. He said he bet it was a hard job; that's what Uncle Joseph said. So go on, tell him anything you want to. You don't get yor ole poem in our newspaper!"

"Not if she lived to be two hundred years old!" Henry Rooter added. Then he had an afterthought. "Not unless she pays for it."

"How do you mean?" Herbert asked, puzzled.

Henry's brow had become corrugated with no little professional impressiveness. "You know what we were talkin' about this morning," he said. "How the right way to run our newspaper, we ought to have some advertisements in it and everything. Well, we want money, don't we? We could put this poem in our newspaper like an advertisement; that is, if Florence has got any money, we could."

Herbert frowned. "If her ole poem isn't too long. I guess we could. Here, let's see it, Florence." And, taking the sheet of paper in his hand, he studied the dimensions of the poem, though without paining himself to read it. "Well, I guess, maybe we can do it," he said. "How much ought we to charge her?"

This question plunged Henry Rooter into a state of calculation, while Florence observed him with veiled anxiety; but after a time he looked up, his brow showing continued strain. "Do you keep a bank, Florence—for nickels and dimes and maybe quarters, you know?" he inquired.

It was her cousin who impulsively replied for her. "No, she don't," he said.

"Not since I was about seven years old!" Florence added sharply, though with dignity. "Do you still make mud pies in your back yard, pray?"

"Now, see here!" Henry objected. "Try and be a lady anyway for a few minutes, can't you? I got to figure out how much we got to charge you for your ole poem, don't I?"

"Well, then," Florence returned, "you better ask me somep'n about that, hadn't you?"

"Well," said Henry Rooter, "have you got any money at home?"

"No, I haven't."

"Have you got any money with you?"

"Yes, I have."

"How much is it?"

"I won't tell you."

Henry frowned. "I guess we ought to make her pay about two dollars and a half," he said, turning to his partner.

Herbert felt deferential; it seemed to him that he had formed a business association with a genius, and for a moment he was dazzled; then he remembered Florence's financial capacities, always well known to him, and he looked depressed. Florence, herself, looked indignant.

"Two dollars and a half!" she cried. "Why, I could buy this whole place for two dollars and a half, printing press, rolling, and all—yes, and you thrown in, Mister Henry Rooter!"

"See here, Florence," Henry said earnestly, "haven't you got two dollars and a half?"

"Of course she hasn't!" his partner assured him. "She never had two dollars and a half in her life!"

"Well, then," said Henry gloomily, "what we goin' to do about it? How much you think we ought to charge her?"

Herbert's expression became noncommittal. "Just let me think a minute," he said; and with his hand to his brow stepped behind the unsuspicious Florence.

"I got to think," he murmured; then with the straightforwardness of his age, he suddenly seized his damsel cousin from the rear and held her in a tight but far from affectionate embrace, pinioning her arms. She shrieked, "Murder!" and "Let me go!" and "Help! Hay-yulp!"

"Look in her pocket," Herbert shouted. "She keeps her money in her skirt pocket when she's got any. It's on the left side of her. Don't let her kick you! Look out!"

"I got it!" said the dexterous Henry, retreating and exhibiting coins. "It's one dime and two nickels—twenty cents. Has she got any more pockets?"

"No, I haven't!" Florence fiercely informed him, as Herbert released

"Look in Her Pocket," Herbert Shouted. "Don't Let Her Kick You!"

her. "And I guess you better hand that money back if you don't want to be arrested for stealing!"

Henry was unmoved. "Twenty cents," he said calculatingly. "Well, all right; it isn't much, but you can have your poem in our newspaper for twenty cents, Florence. If you don't want to pay that much, why take your ole twenty cents and go on away!"

"Yes," said Herbert. "That's as cheap as we'll do it, Florence. Take it or leave it."

"Take it or leave it," Henry Rooter agreed. "That's the way to talk to her; take it, or leave it, Florence. If you don't take it you got to leave it."

Florence was indignant, but she decided to take it. "All right," she said coldly. "I wouldn't pay another cent if I died for it."

"Well, you haven't got another cent, so that's all right," Mr. Rooter remarked; and he honorably extended an open palm, supporting the coins, toward his partner. "Here, Herbert; you can have the dime, or the two nickels, whichever you rather have. It makes no difference to me; I'd as soon have one as the other."

Herbert took the two nickels, and turned to Florence. "See here, Florence," he said, in a tone of strong complaint. "This business is all done and paid for now. What you want to hang around here any more for?"

"Yes, Florence," his partner faithfully seconded him, at once. "We haven't got any more time to waste around here today, and so what you want to stand around in the way and everything for? You ought to know yourself we don't want you."

"I'm not in the way," said Florence hotly. "Whose way am I in?"

"Well, anyhow, if you don't go," Herbert informed her, "we'll carry you downstairs and lock you out."

"I'd just like to see you!" she returned, her eyes flashing. "Just you dare to lay a finger on me again!" And she added, "Anyway, if you did, those ole doors haven't got any lock on 'em. I'll come right straight in and walk right straight up the stairs again!"

Herbert advanced toward her. "Now you pay attention to me," he said. "You've paid for your ole poem, and we got to have some peace around here. I'm goin' straight over to your mother and ask her to come and get you."

Florence gave up. "What difference would that make, Mister Tadditale?" she inquired mockingly. "I wouldn't be here when she came, would I? I'll thank you to notice there's some value to my time, myself; and I'll just politely ask you to excuse me, pray!"

With a proud air, she crushingly departed; and returned to her own home, far from dissatisfied with what she had accomplished. Moreover, she began to expand with the realization of a new importance; and she was gratified with the effect upon her parents, at dinner that evening, when she informed them that she had written a poem which was to be published in the prospective first number of the North End Daily Oriole.

"Written a poem?" said her father. "Well, I declare! Why, that's remarkable, Florence!"

"I'm glad the boys were nice about it," said her mother. "I should have feared they couldn't appreciate it, after being so cross to you about letting you have anything to do with the printing press. They must have thought it was a very good poem."

"Where is the poem, Florence?" Mr. Atwater asked. "Let's read it and see what our little girl can do."

FASHION NOTES

Simple New Wraps

London— Simplicity is carried to the utmost in a new wrap recently designed here. The only complicated thing about this garment lies in giving it a name, for it is neither cape, coat nor scarf, yet has something of each. It consists of a long, straight double piece of brushed wool material, 48 inches wide. The ends are furnished with button holes and eight large pearl buttons. This piece of material is draped across the material and pulled down in the back and the lower ends brought around to the front and buttoned to the upper ends at the waistline. The arms are thrust through the openings left at the waiside by the spacing of the buttons.

Neck Line

New York—To the daguerrotypes of 1830 may be traced the designs for the latest patterns of lingerie which have just reached this country. These are differentiated by the off the shoulder neck line and the very brief puff or ruffle sleeve. One gown of this type has a lace Berthe some three or four inches in width which emphasizes this neckline. The sleeves are merely wide lace ruffles set directly in the armholes. A new type of embroidery suggestive of the open work Swedish darning stitch appears on a set of maize colored voille. This is drawn right out of the cloth and a pattern darned in in white. Negligees and underslings stress the low waistline by means of wide bands of lace insertion or by drawn work and fagoting.

Fall Suits

Deauville, France— One of the most striking and characteristic of the French fall suits was worn here this week, by a well known French actress. It was of a woolen cheviot weave in a warm beige shade. The skirt is plain and straight and hangs about 10 inches from the ground. The paletot is sleeveless of hip length and worn over a full sleeved blouse of beige crepe de chine. The collar was high in the back with wide reverses. Gloves, hosiery, and shoes matched the costume with which was worn a tam of brown velvet with pins with ornamental glass beads the only trimming.

Gay Sleeves Popular

Lenox, Mass.—Sleeves have grown rampantly gay on the newest frocks being worn at the opening of the fall season here. These sleeves are both long and wide and some seem unrelated to the dress itself, being both of different material and color. Some of the longer sleeve designs are gathered at the wrist by bands of beads, kid discs, cire ribbon or coral embroidery. Other sleeves are of two materials, the back portion of soft material with the dress and the front of net, lace or bright colored crepe. Skirts too have taken on width, length and trimmings and are beginning to show insertions, pin tucks, tapping petals, rifles, lace, fur and other embellishments.

THEATRES

PALACE THEATER

It has taken "Midsummer Madness" for William DeMille to show his qaulities of showmanship and artistic appreciation. He has taken a more or less prosaic story and made it palpitate with life. He plays upon the heart-strings much after the manner of a Kreisler. But as skillful as he has shown himself to be in humanizing a story, his ability to construct dramatic sequences and dovetail them together stamps him as an exceptional technician.

"Midsummer Madness" is the most perfectly built picture that has ever been flashed on the screen. The whole structure—the incidents, the action—these move with remarkable precision, and not a superfluous note mars the offering from inception to conclusion. Olga Printzlau, the scenarist, deserves a great deal of credit. If she is responsible for the titling, then she could take equal credit with DeMille. Titles can make or break a picture. Those incorporated here have a definite place and carry the action along with faultless tempo.

It is a rare scene when the outraged husband and the other's wife give utterance to their suspicions. The quarrel is dynamic in its force and is splendidly executed. This is only a sample of the inspired direction. DeMille has given emphasis to the dramatic side and has left the spectacular alone. As a result the picture presents the most direct line of continuity ever shown. The picture is excellently staged and acted. Jack Holt, as the indifferent husband, and Conrad Nagel as the philanderer, give performances in an even key of understanding and feeling. Lila Lee surpasses herself as the outraged wife. Her portrayal will surprise many who thought her incapable of emotion. Lois Wilson acts with admirable force and restraint. The supporting players are equally good in minor roles. "Midsummer Madness" is a sample of how good direction can make a picture. It should go big everywhere. Length 7 reels.

IDEAL THEATER

Juvenile Screen Stars

That the day when the kiddies will shine in the film world is here has been evinced by the number of successful photoplays in which children have featured roles. For instance, "Dinty," which stars Wesley Barry, has enjoyed a highly successful engagement. "The Woman in His House," which gives Richard Headrick an important part, also has established a success. Little Ben Alexander is another youthful star whose name appears in featured position on cast titles. Others of equal importance can be mentioned, such as George Beban, Jr., affectionately known as "Bob White", Robbie Kelso, and Johnnie Jones.

And now comes the latest child celebrity—Jackie Coogan, who was made famous in the Chaplin picture, "The Kid," and who will be seen in the star and title role of "Peck's Bad Boy," released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., at the Ideal Theater. Although he has appeared in but two photoplays, Jackie Coogan is the most talked-about youngster in the world today. His name in on the lips of every movie fan. And his work has put him in a honored position in their hearts.

In "Peck's Bad Boy" Jackie is given every opportunity to display his marvelous talents. And Jackie has taken advantage of these opportunities in no mean manner. Those who have seen the "Peck" film claim his portrayal of the bad boy easily equals his work as "The Kid."

Jackie Coogan has proven that the day for child stars has arrived. This little fellow has commanded as much attention from the amusement lovers as the best and seasoned players. The Reason? Because Jackie's portrayals are natural. He does not act. Every move he makes is undirected. His director explains the action wanted. Jackie does the rest. It is seldom indeed that scenes in which he appears have to be remade. At the present time, Jackie Coogan can easily claim the friendship of more people than any other child—or adult for that matter—in the world.

Who's Who In Wisconsin Rapids

The Who's Who column will be run each Saturday in the Wisconsin Rapids Daily Tribune. It will include a brief sketch of the life of citizens who have helped make history for Wisconsin Rapids.

Miss Ruth Bennett

RUTH CARRIE BENNETT

Miss Ruth Carrie Bennett, County Superintendent of Schools of Wood county, who holds the distinction of being the first woman in the county elected to a county office, is fully proving her ability, successfully serving what has always been considered a "full sized man's job." Miss Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bennett, was born on the Bennett Cranberry marsh, in the town of Port Edwards, or Cranmoor, June 2, 1892.

Studied in County Schools

Her early education was received in the country school near her home. She later attended the Lincoln High School of this city, where she was graduated under the late H. S. Youker with the class of 1908.

After graduating here, Miss Bennett attended the State Normal at Stevens Point for two years.

Taught at Granton

Her first experience as a teacher was in the state graded school at Granton where she taught for two years. The greater part of the year 1913 Miss Bennett spent with a party of friends in a cottage at Biloxi, Miss. The two years following her return, she was a teacher in the grammar room in the village school at Mosinee.

Principal at Boaz

In 1918 she was engaged as principal in the state graded school at Boaz, but before the termination of the school year, she was transferred to Biron to fill the principalship of the school in that village, which was made vacant by the former principal, Martin Zellmer who had been drafted into service in the late war. Miss Bennett was engaged to fill the same position at the Biron school the following year.

The next two years found her as principal of the state graded school at Rudolph. During the summers of 1918-19-20 she attended the summer sessions of the state university at Madison. Previous to the spring election of 1921, Miss Bennett was urged to become a candidate for county superintendent of schools for this county.

Received Large Majority

She was elected by a big majority over her opponent Robert Morris who had served the office for eleven years previous. Miss Bennett's duties involve much hard work which she skillfully masters. During the major part of her term she may be found in her office at the Wood County Normal School. The second Saturday of each month she is at work in Marshfield where she has an office at the Mansion House.

Unusually Qualified

With her educational knowledge and her experience as a teacher, Miss Bennett is unusually qualified to perform the duties her office demands. She is assisted in her work by two school supervisors, Miss Ella Hessler of Vesper and Miss Clara Farrell of Milladore, who were recommended by the Educational Committee of the County Board of Supervisors, and the work under these three capable women, with Miss Bennett at the head, is being carried on in a thoroughly systematic and successful manner. She has deservedly gained the reputation of being one of the best superintendents ever had in Wood county.

Fine Christian Woman

She is a firm believer in the Christian faith, although not belonging to any creed. She was among the first women to cast her vote at the last election and believes woman suffrage to be the key to solve the problem by which means the ballot will be uplifted and strengthened.

Miss Bennett is a member of Rainbow Chapter No. 87 Order of Eastern Star of Wisconsin Rapids. She is not a member of any club either literary or social, her work demanding almost her entire time and attention.

Indianapolis—Minneapolis defeated Indianapolis in the opener of the series here on Friday, 5 to 3. Lowdermilk was wild and passed twelve men, but kept his hits well scattered.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York—Splendid pitching by White Hoyt and strong hitting by Babe Ruth and Walter Pipp enabled the New York Americans to win the first of an all important four game series with Cleveland on Friday by a score of 4 to 2.

Hoyt was in trouble in only one inning, the fourth, when Cleveland scored its two runs on Gardner's single, Sewell's triple and a wild pitch. In the last five innings Cleveland only got three men on bases.

Washintgon, D. C.—Mogridge pitched Washington to a victory over Detroit, 2 to 1, in a duel with Leonard on Friday. A single by Judge scored the winning run in the ninth after the bases had been loaded by Goslin's safety and a pair of passes.

Philadelphia took both ends of a double header from Chicago on Friday by scores of 4 to 0 and 9 to 1.

Boston—The Browns and Red Sox divided a double header on Friday, St. Louis winning the opener, 10 to 2, and Boston the second, 10 to 5.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Chicago—Chicago hit McQuillan hard behind erratic support and easily defeated Boston 13 to 5. Chicago used most of its recruit players, including Charles Kaufman, a pitcher obtained from Winnipeg, who pitched in fine form, experiencing only one bad inning.

Pittsburg—Hamilton's effective pitching enabled Pittsburg to defeat Philadelphia on Friday, 2 to 0. King's batting and fielding featured the contest. The locals scored a run in the first inning on a pass to Bigbee, who was forced by Carey, and the latter scored on Robertson's double. The second run was scored on Maranville's single, his steal of second and Tierney's single.

VALLEY CHAMPIONSHIP IS STILL UNDECIDED

Prospects for an early settlement of the Marshfield-Stevens Point brawl over the Wisconsin valley base ball championship seem to be poor.

The Point club, as valley champions, have been attempting to arrange games with Fox River valley and Lake Shore League teams for the state semi-pro title. This aroused the ire of the Marshfield club, which asserts that by dropping out of the valley league before the end of the season the Point athletes forfeited all claim to the championship.

Stevens Point replied with a challenge to meet the Marshfield nine in a series of games to decide the matter right out on the ball field. Indications at present seem to be that Marshfield will rest content to a paper claim to the valley title.

LOCAL ATHLETE LEADS LAWRENCE FOOTBALLERS

Bill Smith, who starred with the local high school team some years ago, has been elected captain of the Lawrence college football team for the coming year.

Altogether, four local boys are playing with the Appleton college team this year. These, in addition to Smith, are Don McGlynn, Roy Normington and Stanley Stark. The election of McGlynn as chairman of the Junior Rock Committee at Lawrence has just been announced.

INVESTIGATE OPPAU EXPLOSION

Paris—French government chemists have begun an investigation of Oppau to determine whether secret war stores have been clandestinely manufactured. An investigation shows that the spontaneous explosion of nitro-sulphate of ammonia caused the disaster.

Attachments which convert an ordinary preserving jar into an acetylene cigar lighter for smokers have been patented by a Philadelphian.

HUDSON
SUPER SIX
Now Saves You
$705 to $955

Hudson is always included in that small group, which men consciously or not, classify as the really great cars.

But do you ever think how much less Hudson costs than its companion leaders?

Do you realize that even when the Super-Six last year sold for $2600, it was from $1200 to $1500 under-priced for the field in which it ranked by performance, quality, reliability and distinction?

A Distinctive Price Advantage

Never was Hudson's price advantage over cars of comparable quality so striking as now. It is in all respects as great a car, and in many refinements even greater than last year's Super-Six. And think, that then, at $2600 it outsold all fine cars, as it had done for five years previously.

Now with Hudson at the medium price of $1895 does any higher-priced car offer qualities to warrant their vastly increased price differential?

And of the cars in its new price range is there one that you ever even distantly associated with Hudson in any wanted quality?

Now $1895
